Coburg

Castle hotel Coburg Land
The castle hotel Coburg land rises a couple of kilometers remote of the German castles road (Burgenstrasse) on a wooded sand stone hill (394 meters above sea level) west of the Itztal valley. It belongs to the clearly defined and bounded-off unified topographical area Schafhof, a town part of Ahorn in the rural district Coburg, with about 4,800 residents. The distance to Coburg is about 8 km. You can enjoy a beautiful view from the castle hotel Coburg land.

Castle history
The castle was first diplomatically mentioned in the year 1306. Back then, it was owned by countess Jutta from Henneberg. In the year 1456 the gentlemen from Lichtenstein had the castle as a tenure, where they lived in until 1763.

Castle premises
The castle hotel Coburg land presents itself as unique ensemble with surrounding park. According to the ground plan, it has the approximate form of a acute-angled triangle that pulls towards the west. The complex of buildings of different epoch encloses an irregular inner courtyard. In the core, the castle hotel Coburg land equals the new construction, which originated after the destruction of the old castle in the farmer war. Only a stump of the square fortification at the southeast corner of the castle defense wall is maintained. The overall impression is appointed through the historical forms of the late 19th century.

The main building of the castle is the so-called Lichtenstein construction, named after its constructor Michael from Lichtenstein. According to the inscription above the entrance, it was finished in 1571. In the east, the well preserved castle defense wall connects with the defense corridor. It’s also partly integrated in the southern subsequent new building from the 19th century. A round tower from the 16th century with the inscription of a certain Wilhelm of Lichtenstein from the year 1567 served as a stair tower. A medieval gate house with a simple gate, which is not protected any further by the fortification, is built next to it. The northwest stretch of the castle is taken in by the manor house, which partly goes back to both royal castles. The superior corner rooms have recently been renovated and decorated with exclusive wood panels and carvings.
